Turn questions

This isn't to stop me gushing your heart out whenever the urge strikes. (As in, Thursday's strategy meeting isn't the ideal place to open up about all your unresolved childhood wounds. A therapist's office would be better.) But the warranted "I'm upset by this" or "I feel uncomfortable with this" is perfect, too, if it says.

So, if you ever have cause to take issue with someone or something, instead of getting offended, take action to rectify the situation. If you're watching a movie that sucks, stop watching and go do something else. If someone pisses you off, call them on it.

...don't understand ...

I guess I'm biased, I read Strunk and White's book around once a year.

~~The Defenders~~
Think the situations we have to remember in these situations is that 1) we're all human and thus, we screw up. Also 2) beating yourself up about it serves no purpose but to waste your time and stress you out. And finally 3) when in doubt, apologize. Most likely, if you feel bad about it, you probably came off just like you think you did. And even if you didn't, the fact that you're willing to be the proverbial bigger person and right your wrong makes you the kind that most people will WANT to work with. I think most people are very understanding in these situations. Who HASN'T done this, right?
